ORATION BY POWERS

He Speaks On the Manifest Destiny

AMERICA'S MANIFEST DESTINY.

I am one who believes that the hand I am one who believes that the hand of destiny is guiding the advance of the American people. I am one who believes that the stirring events of the present are a part of the great plan, which, when it shall be finally evolved. well girdle the earth with an invisible chain of liberty and progress. From the palaces and the hovels of the world, from the emotional races born beneath sunny skies and from the phlegmatic sunny skies and from the phiegmatic people of rigorous climes, great streams of humanity have poured into our land, and mingling and commingling, they have produced a new race which will sweep away superstition, ignorance and inhumanity, and spread liberty, Christ-ianity and the rights of individuals theorethout every land and over every innity and the rights of individuals throughout every land and over every sea. You may fear for the future and you may argue until doomsday that our geographical lines must not be extended, but you can no more stop the overflow than you can dam the mountain torrent, and the reason can be found in the fact that the expansion of American ideas is manifest destiny. It is a part of the plan of creation. Race after race has swept over the world, each succeeding race attaining to a higher degree of civilization. The records of some are lost in the distance of the past. Only here and there, in the cure the distance of the past of the queerly fashioned implements of the stone age, can we find evidences of their having existed. But, DOES NOT INFRINGE ON THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

This capacity of the plan of creation. Race after race has swept over the world, each succeeding race attaining to a higher degree of civilization. The records of some are lost in the distance of the past. Only here and there, in the rude utensils of the cave dwellers, in the earth works of the mound builders, in the queerly fashioned implements of the stone age, can we find and average and the racings on the rocks, in the ruins of their forgotten temples, in the history of humanity, we learn that each century has noted an advance and that perfection is the goal which humanity seeks. The marvelous advance by this people in science, art, intelligence and in all that makes a nation great, is the forerunner of the years to come, when even the castles of cruel Spain and the mosques of the unspeakable Turk will be light.

This course involves no infringement upon the west, in the racing of some are lost in the distance or the principles of the Monroe doctrine. That idea is simply this: That foreign powers shall not be allowed to extend their influence upon the west in the constitering these questions, we should keep in mind out don't foreign onestic surroundings. We need not fear that the resisting these questions, we should keep in mind out don't foreign death of their influence upon the west to make allowed to extend their influence upon the west in the combined assault of the whole world. Our danger does not lie whole world. Our danger does not lie whole world. Our danger loss not lied capital and resources, become as some man. Our danger lies in the institution of the capital and resources, become as some man. Our danger lies in the institution and in all that makes a nation great, is the forerunner of the years to come, when even the capital and resources, become as sistance to assert our rights, with no fear of the future, and there is no more for which and the rest of the prophile in the capital and resources, become as sistance to assert our rights, with no fear of

AMERICAS UNITY OF PURPOSE.

The first effects of the war have been to astonish the world with-the unity of purpose of the American people. Political lines variabled in an hour and the supporters and opponents of the administration view with each other in all times, be prepared to assert, or the complete that the recognize that the man in overalle is an another to astonish the world with-the unity of purpose of the American people. Political lines wareshed in an hour and the supporters and opponents of the administration view with each other in all times, were observed that the complete of the complete of people will never consent that it shall be wared in a spirit of selfishness, entered upon that suffering humanity should be benefitted, we will never parmit it to degenerate into a crusade for power. Neither will the people be content unless it be waged until the barbarous rule of Spain be ended upon the western continent. The purpose for which the war is waged will not be accomplished if the yellow flag of Spain is permitted to float over a single foot of soil which shall be conquered by our heroes. American ideas must be advanced. American ideas must be advanced. American inciples must be maintained, and neither in Cuba nor in the Philippines shall the people be longer appressed. If such a policy involves a protectorate, it will be our duty to assume the burden. Let the people in those islands be aided in the people in those islands be aided in their efforts for freedom. Let them be instructed in the principles of free gov-ernment. Let them be encouraged in their struggle to govern themselves, their struggle to govern themselves, and let them be protected by this nation until, as children of America, they are competent to stand alone. Through it all, let there be no selfish desire to increase our own power, but, at the same time, let not the bugbear of "imperialism" deter the people and our public men from bravely assuming whatever responsibility the occasion may demand.

the awily shock of Spain's cruei dead; there was necessary the crash and the onset of war to awaken us to our duty and to induce us to cease our worship of comblines, trusts and corporate things and to recognize that there was some, things and to recognize that there was some, things and to recognize that there was some, the first the mine beneath the Maine, quickened the action of the conscience of America, and caused us to recognize that the minions of a cruei race must be driven back across the sea. It sternly called us to account for allowing hundreds of thousands of human beings, struggling as did our forefathers for the privileges of free government, to be fortured and staryed and murdered within one day's sail of our coast. It forever banished the lingering resentments of our civil war, and railied all sections of our land into a barmsulous and particity people. The shall of our coast, the cash of war, the resounding roar of cannon were needed to banish effeminacy and to cause the land to recognize that the man in overalls is quite as often worthy of honor will shelter with their guns the ships of peace, which will control the ocean trade of the world. From the earliest times our wisest statesmen have urged the creation of a strong navy. We have the men, we have the means, and we have the material, and we have been made aware that without it, we may, in the future, find ourselves at the mercy of an otherwise insignificant foe.

Dragged His Spouse About With a Rope and Held Rescuers at Bay With a Gun.

Had Joe Martello pursued to the limit his sataric inclinations early yesterday morning, he would have murdered his spouse. The inhabitants of the Italian quarter on Fifth West street, just below Third South, drank bad whisky and caroused all Sunday night. Martello and his wife were participants in the spree. Just what angered Martello is not known, but at 5 o clock yesterday morning the yard crew at the Rio Grande Western depot was attracted by the shricks of a woman. Running across the street the ratironders saw Martello dragging his wife, with a rope around her body toward a telephone pole. The fellow kept the rescuers at bay with a gun and declared that no one would prevent him in hanging his better half. However, the police were immediately notified and Martello becoming alarmed, desisted in his attempts to hang his oriniken wife. When the officers arrived Martello had decamped, and the neighbors said that Mrs. Martello's sister had gone with him. When Officer Pratt visited the house the woman was still very drunk. She exhibited on her face and neck evidences of her husband's brutal treatment.
